Local Naturalist has made the Shortlist for the 2017 UK Awards for Biological Recording and Information Sharing

Adrian Cooper, from Felixstowe, Suffolk, has been shortlisted in the Adult Newcomer category of the 2017 UK Awards for Biological Recording and Information Sharing.

These annual awards started in 2015, and have been developed by the National Biodiversity Network, the National Forum for Biological Recording and the Biological Records Centre. Their intention is to recognise and celebrate the outstanding contributions made to biological recording by adults and young people, which is helping to improve our understanding of the UK's wildlife.

Adrian Cooper says:

“Biological recording excites me because it provides a precise way to monitor and share conservation success stories. It also provides a clear understanding about the conservation challenges which confront us. When people understand about the rate of wildlife population decline, they realise that their grandchildren, nieces and nephews might not have the same opportunities as the rest of us to enjoy wildlife. The raw data therefore motivates people to get involved in community-based conservation. That helps our local community. It also helps wildlife!

“My motivation to get involved with biological recording arises from my passionate belief that wildlife decline in my home town of Felixstowe is completely unacceptable. My childhood, adolescence and adult life have been hugely enriched by wildlife, so I remain committed to trying to stop that decline, and charting its increases which have been achieved through community involvement.”

The winners of the 2017 UK Awards for Biological Recording and Information Sharing will be announced at a special ceremony on Thursday 16 November during the National Biodiversity Network's annual conference in Cardiff.

2. David Robertson (1806–1896) was a Scottish naturalist who founded the University Marine Biological Station at Millport, which opened in 1897. Millport Marine Biological Station closed in 2013, but reopened in 2014 as Millport Field Centre thanks to the Field Studies Council.
3. Gilbert White (1720 – 1793) is remembered in these awards because his name is synonymous with biological recording. He was one of the first English naturalists to make careful observations of his surroundings and record these observations in a systematic way. He transformed the way we look at the natural world and is recognised as one of the fathers of ecology.
4. Lynne Farrell is a well-respected botanical tour, expedition and field meetings leader. She co-authored the first 'British Red Data Book on Vascular Plants' and has produced and illustrated a pocket book 'Wildflower walks on Mull'. Since 1995 Lynne has been the Botanical Society of Britain and Ireland's voluntary recorder for Mull, Coll and Tiree and is working on writing a new 'Flora of Mull and the Mid Ebudes'.
