Outdoor Learning Experiences

Field Studies Council

Field Studies Council is an environmental education charity, founded in 1943, providing fieldwork and outdoor learning for schools, colleges, universities and lifelong learners. Through UK centres, natural history courses and fold-out guides, we help people of all ages discover, understand and care for nature.

Futures Wild

At Futures Wild we design and build bespoke data platforms for innovators protecting nature, including Birdlife International and the IUCN. We are passionate about leveraging human-centered design to transform how data is collected, aggregated, and presented for nature conservation and regeneration. We prioritise usability and clarity to ensure data is an actionable tool, bridging the gap between complex information and effective activity. Our mission is to inspire transformative action, and to foster a future where conservation is informed, inclusive, and deeply impactful.

National Lottery Awards for All England Environment

The National Lottery Awards for All – Environment programme funds grassroots, community-led action that tackles the climate and nature emergency while strengthening local wellbeing. It supports projects that help people connect with and care for nature, restore local environments, and build resilience through practical, place-based environmental activity. The programme shows how small, community-driven interventions can create meaningful environmental impact.
